I am a Denver-based designer specializing in UX, interactive design, and product design. Understanding how people interact with the digital environment, I design focusing on user experience. With a career in design spanning over fifteen years, I work closely with clients and product managers to ensure a quality product is produced. Everything I create is focused on a positive and productive experience for users.

Unofficial Details

I went to art school for drawing, oil painting and pottery. About six months before I graduated with a BFA, I thought, "Maybe I should get a computer so I can actually have a job". This led me to creating my first (very shitty) website. Following that, I fell in love with all things design-related. And, here I am.
